

Anthony Albanese Announces Australia Visit for Early 2024

November 17, 2023

The Australian Prime Minister will travel to Australia in the first half of next year, it has been confirmed. It will be the first visit by the globe trotting Australian leader since late 2022.

A spokesperson for Mr. Albanese said the PM always enjoyed travelling to Australia. “Mr Albanese has a real affinity with Australia – he grew up there (in a housing commission flat with his single-parent mother), he spent some time working there, he knows a lot people there. It really is his home away from home,” the spokesperson said.

Government officials in Australia said the trip would be a chance to hold high level talks with the Australian Prime Minister on issues of national importance. “We’re hoping to grab some time with him to discuss housing policy, cost of living, climate change, immigration, workplace relations. We’re aware that his international commitments will make his time here very tight, but it’ll be great to get his input on these issues and hopefully work towards some solutions”.

In Related News:

Where in the world has Anthony Albanese been?

Japan - May 2022 = 15,904km

Indonesia - June 2022 = 10,780km

UAE - Spain - France - Ukraine - June/July 2022 = 35,531km
Fiji - July 2022 = 6910km
UK - September 2022 - 33,942km
Japan - September 2022 = 15,904km
Cambodia - Indonesia - Thailand - November 2022 = 19,917km
Papua New Guinea - January 2022 = 5748km
India - United States (San Diego) - Fiji - March 2023 = 35,692km
UK - May 2023 = 33,942km
Japan - May 2023 = 15,904km
Singapore - Vietnam - June 2023 = 16,189km
Germany - Lithuania - July 2023 = 32,124km
New Zealand - July 2023 = 2325km
Indonesia - Philippines - India - September 2023 = 23,361km
United States (Washington) - October 2023 = 31,868km
China - Cook Islands - November 2023 = 25,175km
United States (San Francisco) - November 2023 = 24,370km

Total: 385,586km *All distances are calculated return to/from Canberra